

I can safely say it was another great year for the Lundy clan from Minnesota. Every one is healthy, life is good, but it's cold!

The excitement for the year was when it rained 14" in a two-day period flooding several of our neighbor's homes and created a 20-foot wide river across the street, fortunately we stayed high and dry. Before and after the flood, we made a couple road trips one with Kevin and Kristi in April traveling through Colorado on our way to Santa Fe. Then Dorothy and I slipped away for a week to visit the northern California coast and the redwoods.

I continue to divide my time between work and far too many hobbies. I put the Aspen Valley, my Model Railroad, on a siding (so to speak) for most of the year. Turning my attention to woodworking and tracing our family tree, especially my Norwegian roots.

On the Lunde side I'm back to the 1700's. Dorothy and I hope to take a trip to Norway this spring or summer to meet some of my Norwegian relatives and celebrate our 30th anniversary; it will be our 1st trip to Europe.

Dorothy continues to stay very busy with her volunteer activities and keeping me in line (which is a full time job). She once again has embraced the Christmas season in a big way, doing a great job in decorating the house inside and out. She continues to expand her collection of lighthouses and we have added lighthouse hunting to our key vacation activities along with chasing trains.

Kristi's world revolves around her new pride and joy, her car. The car and Kristi go everywhere; it has provided her with a new sense of freedom, but at price. She now puts in many hours at the local Hallmark store to earn enough to make those outlandish payments to that fine financial institution, her old man. Outside of school and her job, she enjoys music, going to the movies, boys and solving the world's problems and social crisis's with her friends. She also wanted me to point out to her brothers that she got a whole lot of A's on her last report card!

Kevin still calls Breckenridge Home. He continues to redefine the business community in Breckenridge, recently expanding the restaurant delivery service he operates along with his partner. In his spare time he continues to burn up the slopes with his snowboard.

Ken, Rachel and Sara have had an exciting year, both Ken & Rachel started new jobs. Ken embarked on a new career working for a major health insurance company and Rachel is still in childcare, but with a new firm. Sara of course continues to grow and is picking up some of PaPa's (Grandpa's) best traits. I'm sure you would get another side of the story if you talked to Dorothy (a very proud Grandmother) but that's my story and I'm sticking to it.

One last thought, please join us in remembering Bethsheba (a feline member of our family) and Michael Moorman a very dear friend. God Bless and Merry Christmas!

P.S. I would encourage you to stop by our web site www.lundy.org and check it out, especially the Genealogy section.
